Robbed!

You wouldn't pay for a dozen oranges and accept half a dozen. Yet you pay for a pound of coffee and accept half a pound! Suppose you look at it in this way:— You buy coffee for its thaver and aroma. Roasted coffee parts very quickly with both when exposed to the air. It is possible for a pound of coffee to lose one-half its strength. It is then of no more calse than half a jaund of fresh coffee.

When you buy exposed coffee from a bin it has host more or less of its virtue. You don't get Union Literary Circle.

The Union Literary Circle met Tuesday evening, Jan. 23, with Miss Anna II. Tower. Miss Tower read a very interest-ing paper on "flesults of the Crimean War." Miss Allyn in a very enjoyable pa-per compared Dickens, Thackery and Collins. Mrs. B. L. Hint read a paper Collins. Mrs. H. L. Hint read a paper on "The open door in China. Miss Washlourn read an interesting magazine article on the same subject. After these papers, the aubject of the British Boer War being brought up, a very interesting discussion on this subject was in order; the principal particlepauts in the discussion were Rev. William Hyde, Mr. Chamberlain and Rev. Frank R. Cressy. The next meeting will be held Monday evening, Fels. 5, with Mrs. J. G. Worster. Quotations on Egypt or the Canal. Members of the circle take

For one tibing, the organist is an arrist, and every artist has a unture of special refinement which cannot bear the rough-and-timoide ordinary methods of life. With a man of common clay you deal in a practical, straight-forward and even brutal fashion, arguing with him, compiduling to him, and putting him right when he is wrong. But no man must handle preclosus porcellain in such fussion, or the artist-will be instantly wounded and will resign oul carry his pathetic story to every quarter, for, an arule, the organist thinks that he is lifted above criticism and public opinion. It is impossible to tends him mything; it is an insult to suppose that onything could be better than the music he provides. t suppose?

Mr. Oddle Iooh a holiday the day the baquet was sent off from Caveut garden; to all atill in his office was of thing impossible. He went for a long walk but where his near little legs took him he was cere rolle to say.

The next day the agony increased; there ween alga. Mr. Oddle fell pluing into the depths of despair, and was sont inced that phead officeded his ladytone. He had not been properly introduced; the phrase became a perfect lightmers to him.

But the second day there was the bodynet in the whatow in all its glory.

If the weather of the whatow is all its glory, and, sorcer, Mice Hexham was bending over it, inhaling the performe. She was a beautiful woman; out too young for a mno-pheor-lo big prime. They wonder was that the manner of the weather woman in the control of the prime. They wonder was the state in treasure had not been snapped op before.

Markham Oddle wrote to Mrs. Hasham. It took him house and hours to 9.50, 10.50 P. M. SUNDAY.

the neat torrent lesping from the creat of high falls, shooting rophis and excepting over awful cataracts. At the end of an bout they emerged from the unrow canyon and entered a long attracted of deep green water, slowly anothing, sun-kinsed and quitel. So still seemed the beautiful river that they were obliged to take markers on the shore to see if they resulty moved. Far away, at the end of the streets of peucrfat water, the river seemed to and high. The water, running over and flowing down the face of the clift, had aftenked and striped the red sandatone until it looked in the aunlight like a beautiful piece of tupestry, and the desperanto called it. Tapestry wall, and so it has been called ever since.

The river, however, this mate and there,
swhiging in a long, graceful curve,
growing swifter and awifter, it sucked into a narrow pass and became a raging, frothing catract.
For some moments they saw nothing and heard only the awful timult of the builling river, and then with a slam the raft hung upon a hig rock that split the carrent near the middle of the attram.

When the absplient had wiped the spiray from the companion into the eith N. 11. Canterlory as secretary. The annual town reports are being dis-tributed in the citizens this week and the books will be carefully read by intelli-gent miers. The town warrant is also out with its 61 articles describing the needs and wants of the town for the com-ing year. The readers of the town re-port will discover that deliciencies and with N. D. Camprony as acreasy.

The meeting inonstitately proceeded to business of the hour and its work was finished in about twenty infunces.
Nelson W. Cardiner was monitated by archamation for selections and oversies of poor; John W. Bates, for assessor: Nathaniel R. Peare and Asa R. Pratt, for constables; M. E. Hawes, H. L. Humph-rey, E. Q. S. Litchilehl, William Tobin port will discover that dediclencies and constables; M. E. Hawes, H. L. Humpdowerlarfts exist in very few departments and only for moderate sums, while there are balances in several departments. This state of the affairs of the town cannot but be gratifying to the eliterns as it means a lower tax rate for the coming year, by perhaps For more on the thousand as estimated, as we understand, by the selectmen, provided of course that the town is not unitally layish in its appropriations.

J. E. Farrell caused a little deviction by getting the floor and attempting a priations.

1. C. Farrell caused a little deviation by getting the fisor and attempting a special in regard to roal commissioner; the was called to order by the chair and replied with remarks laid down as not in accordance with parliamentary usages and yesterday being a holiday, several matters are necessarily left over until next.

Frank P. Bennett's bill to reimburse th lown of Sangus in the sum of $100,000 for money spent on the old Salem Jurnpike since it became a unbile highway, is a fine thing as far as the town of Sangus is concerned, but it is a piece of highsa-tim on which the state should go slow. There have been turnpikes and turnpike

HELEN BLAZES

Tills Ia a story of a mare that made her, repraction during the weeks of almost incesson inghiting before Petershurg and thermuda Hundred. She lost her life he is acrimmage in which she was nearly the whole thing, for she had a way of taking matters into her own control and carrying her rider into the thickest of the flight, whether he liked it or not.

Shr was such a warrior herself that when she gai worked up to the proper pitch she paint no attention to highe calls or orders, and always started in to thrash the enemy single hunded. That was one reoson why she was called iteirn illares. But there was monther—her temper.

The name was not spelled just that way by the boys of the Third New York eavalry, but Jeb Smith, the nam who rodr her—and the only man who ever could thie her—was a minister hefore the war broke out, so he changed the original three words of her name into two, thus quieting his considere and original three words of her name into two, thus quieting his considence and satisfying "the boys" at the same time. She was picked up one night on a scouting expedition. Wink Tomkins brought her into outinp the next morning, and he was a sight. You could hear him swearing at illuzes when they were a mile away, and between his curses and the langifier of his companions, and the pinnging and kicking, biting and siriking of the made as likey approached, it made a pretty sight for tired cavalrymen.

"Get up her linck, parson, and try her."
Mind you, there was not one in tha erowd who had not tried her, and who could not show a substantial briles for his tenerity. But the parson never caught on ot all, and we all stood hack while he banded his piece to a contrade, and without a maneut's lestination in without a maneut's lestination wilked straight up to the mare and began to rub her oose; and what's more, she seemed to like it.

You could hove purchased the whole campany for a very small sum at that moment, for we felt nightly cheup. We didn't know whether it was jugglery, or what it was, but the fart remained that the mare did not treat him as she had treated us.

"Say, parson," hawled Wink Tompe him, "have yon ever seen the critier before?"

kins, "have you ever seen the critier before?"

"Certainly not," was the caim ceply. "Why?"

"Well, I'm blowed! Itoys, there's authla' in religion ofter all."
While he was thus expressing himself, Jeb leaped into the saddie, and ina moment more he was rhiling around the place as easy as you pieuse. Itazes single-footed, dug-trotted and cantered, and you'd have thought she was a Christmas-tree-rocking-larse, for all the ugliness he showed then.

"Who owas her?" asked the parson.
"You do, Jeb; yon've enrued her," said old Mac; and he waked away with u seewl on his face.

Well, Jeb was delighted, and he ilstened with amazement when we told him what a circus we'd been having. It

Well, Jeb was delighted, and be the tened with amazement when we told him what a circus we'd been hading. It was plain that he did not believe all of h, and presently he led her may to the stable, took the suidle off and tied her. There was only a pide between the horses, and Jeb hado't got haff way back to where we were sitting, when there was the wort reaked in that sin-hle you ever heard. Voud have thought the rebs were after us for the noise and maint. The torses neighted and spoaded and you could hear loards splintering and timbers falling. Ulares had kicked berreff love, laid up two horses, scarred for ilfe a half dozen more, and pawed aer way right through the back of that

We fised up the status, but we passed a unanloons resolution that Hares couldn't starty there say more, so the parson took her about 20 rods away and tied her to a fence. Then he gave her aome oats, and you'd nave thought she was the three graces rolled into one she was so quiet; but it stilch't tast inng. She finished her outs, and maybe she got tired or thirsty, or something. Anyhow, she pulled away one section of the fence, and broke laose from that, and then she started for the stable again. Some of as heard the horses squealing and kicking, and we went down to see whnt was the matter, and I'm hiessed if filizes wasn't trying to cat them. She'd reach in and take a monthful of loose flesh, set her treth on it and pull, and then, when the harse she was bitting kicked, she'd wheel and kick too. After thas we made alls the her with a case, and always ha something

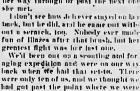

I was abreast of Jeb when we got the cord, and I never saw anything made of flesh and blood do what Illazes did then. Jeb couldn't hald her any more eord, and I never saw anything made of fiesh and blood do what Illazes did then. Jeb couldn't hald her any more than you could hold u cyclone, and she ran like a streak of lightning. In the 30 or 40 rods between on und the confederates abe got more than two rods ahsad of the rast of un, so substruck the line first. I'll bet she covered 30 feet at leaver jump, and finally abe took an admighty plungs limit be ale, and landed plumpon top of a confederate sergead and his horse, knocking them both down as easily as she would a blads or grass.

Bas reared and plunged, struck with Jesus and limited as a served and plunged, struck with J. E. Coanell, Weymouth.

down as easily as she would a Disus of grass.

She reared and plunged, struck with her forsfeet, kieked with her bind ones, and also used her teeth like a tiger. She'd grab a rebel horse by the throat here and tear out a chunk of fleah; ahe'd seize a man by the leg or the arm, and all him out of the smille and trample upon him quicker than you could knock in out with a salar, and every than he had a chance she'd joing into the air not land right on top of horse and hirr, and then blue and tear units righ-ce way through or post the next one-be met.

thier, and then bite and lear undistriks her way through or past the next one she met.

I flor't see him she hever stryed on he tones, but he did, and he can ac out without a serately, too. Nobody ever made fun of Illazes after that brush, but her greatest fight was her last one.

We'll been out on a swouting and for aging expedition and were on our way back when we had that set-to. There were only ten of us, and we thought we had got past the pulat where we were likely to fatt in with any rels, when we saw a byll company of confederate enviry come over the top of a knoll not a quarter of a mile away.

There was no use for us in try bottom, for we would only have run lato thair lines, and there wasn't a man there who wanted to surrender, so we yelled lands and started to meet them.

We came together, and to a second we were all mixed up. Thay surrounded in sike like around a honey pat. We were so few that we could not keep together, and every man fought for himself, regardless of the others. Still, everyhody could telt where librate was at the time, by the commotion she kicked app and when in a light like that one thing kicks up enough extra commution to be noticed, you can be it's moting.

I got a builted through my right shoulder and naother one in my befurum, and I was helpiess; and just then my horsegot a saber elly on the she of his head which sent bilms crazy, and somethow, he manged to kick kinself cut of the melie before he dropped, which he did with one of my legs mabe thin; but I was where I combise the fight, and I kept my eyes on illazes.

Just as I discovered for I saw ship

Just as I discovered torr, I saw deb Smith pitch head first out of his smille, and I knew that the purson was done.

and I knew that the parson was done for.

Illazes seemed to know It, too. She had been wild before, but she became a perfect demon them. She must have known that she had no rider, and most horses quit lighting when the man is gone off from their bucks; but she ddin't. She only got wilder andwent in for vengeance.

She no langer pald any attention to the horses, but she went for the men, and whenever she gradied one she literally fore him apart. Hundreds of shots were fired at her, and her body was covered with laboul from the salive cuts she had received, but she pawed and klekek, and tore with her bods and teeth, turning like a cut, and horming

The French have made a tradical study of chier, doublirss partly because it takes the place of which in parts of France, and the result of such study has led the French experts to the conclu-sion that the presence of malle ach and of tunnin he whice makes it in great hygicule value. Some dyspepties can pout cludy it, but in some forms of in-terstinal truthle it is helpful. It is rec-nomentally expectally to gooty per-tons.

To be wholesome, however, either must be in good condition, and es pecially it must not be too hard. The sile method of putting up elder in a strong and securely corked bottle along with three or four rulsins and stablespoorfed of sugar ton pit, is still practiced in this country, and the result is a delightful beverage with all the effectivement of demandars. have discovered a cheaper method, an that is to place in elder that is to be pro that is to place in elder that is to be per served from harkening a small quantity of the subultrate of bismuth. It is found that a parily consumed barrel of rapidly hardening elder may thus is preserved for many months. The hard enling process is not allogether arrest ed, but it gaes on very shortly. The French have also discovered method of preserving the bright trans-parency of elder. Must cluer when ex-posed to the light becomes clouded and brown.
